

Port call in Salvador de Bahía

STOPOVER

4
days

The Tara schooner stopped in Salvador de Bahía, Brazil, as part of the Mission Microbiomes expedition which is currently going down the Brazilian coast.

SCHOOLS

During the event, local school pupils visited the boat and met the crew to learn about the Ocean and the Mission Microbiomes. 30 students were also able to participate in a painting workshop with local artist Menelaw Sete.

100
pupils 1
artist

LOCAL SUPPORT

6
volunteers

The success of our port calls depend on the engagement from the local population and students.

PUBLIC EVENTS

During the stopover we had hands on workshops, an open conference, the exhibition "Plastics at sea, solutions are on land" and screening of a film.

4
events

Port call in Salvador de Bahía

SCIENCE CONFERENCE

20
scientists

AtlantECO local partner, the Universidade Federal da Bahia, organised a conference to present the Mission Microbiomes and the AtlantECO project to local academics

LIVE WITH Tara

Six schools from France were able to connect to the boat during the stopover, they were able to chat to the team and ask questions about the Mission.

6
calls

PRESS

36
articles

Local media engagement was strong in Salvador, with many articles covering the event, the importance of the Mission and its role in AtlantECO.

VIPs

The Tara Foundation organised a high profile event with local authorities, policy makers and local stakeholders

60
officials

